BACKGROUND: The Kentucky Superintendent of the Year Award is presented by the Kentucky Association of School Administrators and sponsored by Scientific Learning. The award is given annually to one superintendent who has demonstrated outstanding education leadership, creativity in meeting the diverse needs of students, strength in professional and personal communication, consistent professional development as well as motivation of district staff, and active involvement in the community. Recipients are selected by statewide judging panel and are given a commemorative eagle sculpture and a $2000 scholarship for a high school senior in his or her district.

The Kentucky Superintendent of the Year Award is a steppingstone to the American Association of School Administrators (AASA) national award. AASA will name the National Superintendent of the Year at its annual conference in February.

KASA is the largest school administrators group in Kentucky, representing more than 3000 education leaders from the across the commonwealth. Formed in 1969, KASA connects education leaders to policy makers, legislators, and other interest groups, and provides numerous benefits and services to Kentucky's school administrators.
